[From the Louisville Ledger | OH! BRING THAT BASKET BACK TO ME -A SONG.

BY ALICE M'CLURE GRIFFIN.

Oh! bring that basket back to me, Or place it on his breast again, And set your wicked conscience free, And wipe from it the sinful stain.

I placed those bright immortelles there-Fit emblems of the soul above, For no one yet had thought to rear O'er him a monument of love.

Whose idle hand, with stealthy grasp, Purloined the tiny offering? Can such a hand expect to clasp Another's now without a sting?

Pray, who are you? to take the flowers, And cast aside the image fair, How could such secret, thieving powers Steal them before that shell and prayers?

Who could so desecrate the grave Where sleeps the poet in his rest?
None but a poor and coward slave
Could take the flowers from off his breast.

Then bring that basket back again, And ask the angels to forgive Your idle trespass, or the stain

Will deepen on you while you live. LOUISVILLE, March 2, 1871,

Tom Marshall on Papal Supremacy.

The discourses of the pulpit and the press at the present time in regard to apprehended dangers of papal supremacy in this country bring to my mind certain remarks of the late Thomas F. Marshall, at Columbus, Ohio, in 1856, on the subject. Know-Nothi then prevalent, and many members of our Legislature had been elected by the order. A number of these gentlemen crowded around Marshall one evening at the Neil House, importonate to obtain his views. He straightened himself up and gave evidence, in his manner, of a certain degree of contempt for his interrogators, and replied: 'Gentlemen, some time ago, when I saw every American ruffian and blackguard so solicitous to preserve for us a pure religion, and so concerned about the Pope's taking this country, I may say that I was a little alarmed, and, according to my habit, began to study the dan-I soon found that the Pope had no ships in which to cross the ocean, and it all at once struck me that, for a man of his age, it would be such a d-d long swim that nobody need

The Solons slowly dispersed. Marshall's views are commended to the attention of a terrified pulpit and press.

Cincinnati Commercial. LITERARY BOHEMIANS. - Professor Noah Porter, in his "Books and Reading," thus sketches the "Bohemian:" "He is a person of no mean qualifications, but smart rather than solid, and apt rather than trustworthy. He has received an education more or less accomplished, from the finished classical culture of the English University, down to the seanty but stimulating curriculum of the printing and editorial rooms. He has a facile command of the pen, a good memory, a ready wit, and infinite volubility. His assurance is unbounded, and his principles and his sense of consistency. and his principles and his sense of consistency never stand in the way of an engagement. He does not hesitate to write leaders at the same time in the organs of two opposing parties, -for and against protection, or whatever question divides the parties of the day. He is ready for hire to appland and to defame any man, and to extol and depress the same man in two successive weeks, according to his engagement. He is, of course, thoroughly insincere, and he has no convictions except upon a single point, and that is, that those who pretend to have any are either weakly, sent-necestary are self-conscious knaves. And yet no class of writers uses the vocabulary of earnestness more fervently and impressively than he."

How to Cure Stammering.—Lute A Taylor, editor of the Lacrosse (Wis.) Leader, who has been an inveterate stammerer, writes as stammering person ever found any difficulty in Sovie. singing. The reason of this is, that by observ- Lincoln, ing the measure of the music-by keeping time-the organs of speech are kept in such position that enunciation is easy. Apply the same rule to reading or speech, and the same result will follow. Let the stammerer take a sentence, say this one-'Leander swam the Hellespont'-and pronounce it by syllables, scan it, keeping time with his finger if necessary, letting each syllable occupy the same time, thus: Le-an-der-swam-the-Hel-lespont, and he will not stammer. Let him pronounce slowly at first, then faster, but still keeping the time; keeping time with words in- | Sectt, ad of syllables, and he will be surprised to find that, by very little practice, he will read without stammering, and nearly as rapidly as persons ordinarily talk or read. Then practice, tice this in reading and conversation until the habit is broken up. Perseverance and attention habit is broken up. Fersevenue a perfect Greenup.

A clergyman relates that early in his Roberts ministry he and another brother were conducting a meeting in which there was much religious interest. An old man gave expression to his joy by shouting, and continued it until it began to interrupt the service. Brother H—said to brother W—, "Go and stop that old man's noise." The shouting man at once became quiet. Brother H—asked brother W—— what he said to the old man to ministry he and another brother were conductbrother W— what he said to the old man to make him so quie; Brother W— replied, "I asked him for a dollar for foreign missions."

M de Bismarck was the more pressing to get rid of the nuisance; because the Parisian journalists Un and after May 14th, 1871, trains will leave Frankfort daily (Sundays excepted) as which should destroy them under the very walls of Paris. A commission of savans was named, and, for want of any other conveyance they were provided with municipal mournin conches with the drivers in three-cornered hats and full uniform. They started for Villiers and Champigny, and made a report. The ulti-mate recommendation was, that the bodies should not be exhumed, but that the trenche containing them should be covered with a layer of soil not-more than two teet deep, and that they should be sown with the seeds o rapidly-growing plants—mustard plant, sun-flower, or quickly-growing grasses, which could be used as green food for cattle.

They particularly recommended the sun-flower as a "precious plant," for the purpose, as having a great power of absorbing the nitrogenous matters in which the soil would be so rich, as yielding an excellent oil from its seed, good forage from its leaves, and having a com oustible stalk which can be used in the domestic fireplace.

A Virginian mother-in-law, less prudent han most of her kind in the selection of methods of annoyance, foolishly laid in wait for her daughter's husband in ghostly apparel expecting by this clumsy expedient to give nim a fright-as if a nervous system rendered callous to mother-in-law in the flesh would be likely to quail before a disembodied apparition The shrewd fellow had presence of mind enough to pretend that he did not recognize her, and gave the supposed spectre a sound drubbing. Lucky dog! there are few sous-inlaw to whom such a golden opportunity has ever offered itself.

MEDICAL.

I arge nice Hams, both Ayer's Sarsaparilla, firm and hard, FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been putrified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and ur felt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly developinto one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparitla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this Sarsaparitla is advisable, oven when no active symptoms of of sease appear. We believe that if the negroes were left free to vote as their interest inclines them, just as the white vote is influenced, quite one half would vote with the Democrats, from whom they receive employment. Under the system of terrorism they are coerced to go against their best friends, and it is not right that the few who have the independence to resist this tyranny should be subjected to the violence of a dictatorial organization. Our advice to all such negroes as have been threatened is, to let it be known, so that the law, which both State and Federal is severe, may be enforced against their enemies. The question involved is one of principle, and there is not a Democrat who should not be ready, in every way, to protect the humblest negro whose inclination has led him to vote with our party.

Our last news from Campbell is more cheering. Intead of losing both Representatives we lose but one-A. S. Berry, whose defeat we truly regret. Wm. A. TRIVOLI HOME SCHOOL REOPENS MONDAY, SEPTEMBER FOURTH

Miss M. E. KELLY, Midway, Ky.

Such is the caption of an article which has been going the rounds of the papers for some time, and which appears to be something new "under the sun." Just as if editors were not in the babit of going to Heaven. We'll venture to say that a greater proportion of them go to the home of those who have performed their mission of mercy on earth, than any other profession or celling that poor mortals fill. "An editor in Heaven." There's nothing strange about that, at all. It's almost a moral as well as professional impossibility for them to go anywhere else. Once upon a time, after the demise of a member of the "corps editorial," he presented himself at the gate of the "Golden City," and requested admission. The door-keeper asked him what had been the occupation while on Terra Firma? Hereplied he was an editor.

"Well," said the watchman, "we have a crowd of your kind here now, and they all came in as 'dead heads.' If you pay your passage you can come in, if not, you must place yourself under the control of a personage you 'ruled tyrannically down below,' "-meaning

Not having the "wherewith" to go in, our brother of the "quill and scissors" posted off and presented himself at the entrance of Clootie's dark domains. A very dark complexioned gentleman stood sentry, and asked in a gruff voice, "who comes?"

"An humble disciple of Faust," was the calm reply.
"Then hold on, you can't be admitted," exclaimed the gentleman in black, evincing considerable agitation, and fiercely scowling upon

"Why not?" demanded the "typo," who be-gan to get "somewhat huffish" and looked around for a "sheep's foot" with which to force an entrance.

"Well, sir," replied his stable majesty, "we let one of your profession in here many years ago, and he kept up a continual row with his former delinquent subscribers, and as we have more of that class of persons here than any other, we have passed a law prohibiting the and last Monday in August. Chancery admission of any editors, only those who have Ferm—Fourth Monday in June. Fiscal Term advanced our interest in their papers on earth, -Last Monday in January. and even those who keep in a separate room by themselves. You have published many things operating against us, and always blamed the Devil with everything that went wrong, so you can't come in. We enforce this rule 'without respect to persons' for our own peace and safety. Now travel.'

Casting a droll leer at the outside sentinel, our typographical friend started off again, determined to get "up above." This time he took with him an old file of his paper and presenting it to the guardian of the Celestial City, requested that it might be carefully examined, and they could see whether he was entitled to a free ticket. In due course of time the conductor came along and took him in, telling him that he had been a martyr to the cause of human improvement, and that resolutions had peen passed to admit all members of the "art ber. G. C. Hughes—On Saturday after the preservative" who "had abused the "Devil" while below. He added that as they were punished enough by their being with the "devil," all their future punishment is commuted. He further stated that not one delinquent newspaper subscriber could be found in

A Harmless Reptile.

Not only are toads harmless, but they are absolutely and directly useful to us, perambulating our fields and gardens at night, and devouring vast quantities of injurious insects which could never be destroyed by the hand of man. The mode in which a toad takes its prey is very curious. The singularly beautiful eye of toad is as quick as it is bright, and if within the range of its vision an insect or a grub should happen to move, the toad is sure to see it, and nearly certain to catch it. First, the toad holds its head as high as possible, so as to Sunday services—11 A. M.; 7 P. M. make sure of its prey, and then crawls slowly toward it, preferring toget under it if possible. When it is nearly within reach it gazes in-tently at the insect, its mouth being gradually brought nearer and nearer. Something pink then flashes from its mouth, and the insect

The pink flash is the tongue of the toad, which is formed in a rather curious way. The base of the tongue is fixed close to the front o the lower jaw, and is long and tapering, the tip pointing down the throat when it is at rest. When, however, it is used for catching prey, it is thrown out with a sort of "flick," and the tip, which is covered with a glutinous secretion, adheres to the insect, and conveys it down the toad's throat before the prey has had time to make an effort for escape. When the toad swallows its prey, it does it with a mighty effort, during which the eyes almost disappear, the size of the insect having little to do with the vehemence of the demonstration Sometimes, when a large beetle is swallowed, it does struggle, but too late, and for some time its struggles may be seen through the thin and ribless sides of its captor, the toad sitting the while in perfect composure, not in the least affected by the scratchings and kickings that are going on in its interior.

Indeed, the stomach of the toad seems as devoid of feeling as if it were of iron. Moreover, the told not only eares nothing for the scratchings and kickings of a large beetle, but is equally indifferent to the stings of wasps, bees, and insects similarly armed with venom-ous weapons, and will eat them with marvellous appetite, as if the sting acted as a sort of gentle aid to digestion, like cayenne pepper with cucumber.— Cassel s Magazine.

Time to Cut Timber.

A correspondent of the Southern Cultivator, in communicating the following experiments, remarks that the best time to cut timber is 290 Main street, between Seventh and Eighth, when in full leaf-July and August-and that, the knowledge would have been worth thousands of dollars to him had he possessed it

Lot No. 1 was cut cut in July, 1860-house logs to put up cabin; red oak. They were put up but not covered; been exposed the whole time; still sound.

No. 2 was square timber for gin houses, of red oak, post oak, and over cup, was gotten out December, 1860; piled and covered with plank till 1863; exposed since that time; sound on the outside about two inches; perfectly rotten in the heart; red oak worst

No. 3 was of the same kind of timber; subject to more exposure; gotten out in June, 1861; much sounder than No. 2; green timber in July, 1861; subject to the same exposure as No. 2; still quite sound.

-To TRAIN A HORSE TO STAND .- Take your horse on the barn floor and throw a strap over his back and fasten it to his right fore foot, lead him along and say "whoa," at the same time pull down the strap, which throwshim on three feet and makes him stop suddenly. This is the best way known to teach whoa, though you can put on the war bridle, and say whoa, and give him a sharp jerk that will stop him about as soon as the strap to his foot. Then put him in harness with the foot strap, as directed to do under the head of "training to harness," and drive him up to the door. moment he undertakes to move, take his foot and say whoa. Get in your carriage and get out again; rattle the thills, make all the noise getting in and out you can; give him to understand by snatching his foot each time he moves that he must stand until you tell him to go and after a few times you can put the whole family in the carriage and he won't stir out of his tracks .- American Stock Journal.

How A Horse Steps. - Boys that ride horses to plow are advised by the Maine Farmer to remember that a horse does nearly all the stepping, when he turns, with the fore feet. He makes use of the hind feet chiefly as a pivot. Now, just take care of his fore feet and keep them away from the hills, and pay no attention to his hind feet, and you will succeed sale to the trade on reasonable terms for cash.
